W. & R. LECKY'S

SUPERIOR EXTRA PATENT

PLOUGHS

Warranted equal to any ever made in the United States.

In pointing out the advantages of the Ploughs over those generally termed 'Peacock's Patent Ploughs,' the subscribers assure the public that they are not actuated by any motives of jealousy or hostility to the persons who have, as they themselves state, purchased the rights for a 'valuable consideration.' But when on a fair trial, the superiority of their Ploughs has been so generally acknowledged by practical farmers, and from the very rapid sale they have met with, they are induced to prefer their claim to precedence.

Because—Their ploughs have a whole share and landside with a socket, made of wrought iron and steel, which prevents the necessity of a number of screws and bolts, which impede the operation of the ploughs by catching roots, grass, &c.

Because—They are so constructed, that any of the irons may be separately taken to a smith's shop for repair, without the necessity, as in case of 'Peacock's Patents,' of taking the whole plough to the shop.

Because—They are more simple in their construction, and less liable to be out of repair.

The ploughs will all be branded with the names of the subscribers, and warranted, and a general assortment of the various sizes always on hand. Also on hand, a quantity of IRONS and CASTINGS, which will be sold on moderate terms, and instructions given (gratis) to such persons as may wish to make the wood work of their own ploughs.

As the proprietors of 'Peacock's Patents,' wish to deter the public from purchasing what they call 'half patents,' in allusion as we believe to those made by the subscribers, under the penalties of the law for every infringement, we deem it proper to state, that those who are disposed to purchase from us will be indemnified, in any security they demand, from the threats thus improperly held out.

Their ploughs are always made of the best materials, and of well seasoned wood.

They still carry on the COACH & WAGGON making business, at their old stand in Wood st. corner of Virgin alley.

The utility, convenience and economy of "*C. As this Stove has already obtained the entire approbation of many respectable citizens of Pittsburgh and various parts of the western country who have made trial of it, the subscriber refers to such for any information that may be desired respecting this great improvement in domestic economy.

AWFUL FIRE.

The citizens of this borough, between the silent hours of 12 and 1, yesterday morning, were alarmed by the awful cry of fire, which broke out amongst the buildings on the south side of Market square in east Penn street, and terminated in the complete destruction of six valuable houses and their appendant buildings, viz. a two story stone house, occupied by Lane & Orrich as a store, the property of Mr. Priestly, of Northumberland; two two-story brick houses, one used as a store and the other as a dwelling, occupied by and belonging to Mr William Bell merchant, a two story frame house, occupied as a millinery shop, by a lady, the property of William Moore, merchant; a two story brick house occupied as a store by Mr. Moore, and also owned by him; a two story brick house, the property of Mr. James Bell, occupied as a shoe store by Messrs. O'Brien & Foster.

A seventh house, late the property of James May, deceased, was materially injured, and would have shared the fate of the other six, had it not been for the unremitted exertions of our fellow citizens.

The large three story brick house, the property of and occupied by Mr. Samuel Bell, which was on fire several times, was saved only by the greatest exertions of a few individuals.

The fire is said to have originated in the back building attached to Mr. Bell's store, filled with liquor and other combustible matter. Popular opinion inclines to attribute this calamity to the machinations of an incendiary. The opinion is in a great measure strengthened from the circumstance of there having been discovered on two former occasions, a quantity of combustible matter which had been clandestinely deposited in different parts of the house.

The wind blowing very strong from the south-east, great quantities of coals and flakes of fire, were carried over the town, which occasioned much distress and anxiety, from an apprehension that the town would take fire in another quarter.

It is peculiarly gratifying to us to notice the active zeal of the female inhabitants, in discharging the most laborious duties which they voluntarily imposed on themselves. Certainly none who aided in arresting the progress of the flames, are more deserving of the commendation and the gratitude of the public.

The loss of store goods and other property sustained by each individual, can not yet be ascertained, but must be considerable, as the progress of the element was so rapid that in one short hour the houses were completely enveloped in flames.

It is painful for us to dwell on this awful subject—let the distresses of the sufferers excite our sympathy—and let us bear in mind the holy adage: 'Do unto others as you wish them to do unto you.'—

Journal.

MURDER.

WOODBURY, N. J. May 3.

It is with feelings of pity for the deluded creature, who committed the horrid deed, and regret for the outrage against the laws of society, we relate the following account of a murder comitted near Barnsborough, in this county, on Tuesday the 26th ult. The circumstances which gave rise to this act, are, as near as we can learn, as follows:

John Gooby and George Tiller, the deceased, (both men of colour) lived adjoining each other, Tiller owned a hog which was occasionally in the habit of trespassing upon Gooby's property, and this circumstance frequently led to quarrels between them. On the day of the rencontre the animal had broken into Gooby's ground, who upon discovering the hog, took his gun and repaired to the house of the deceased, and told him he would have satisfaction, and he, the deceased, must take his gun and defend himself, Tiller thinking that he was in jest, said "then we had better fight a duel," he accordingly took down his gun and went to the door, but seeing Gooby's threatening appearance, said, "I believe you are in earnest," the other replied "to be sure I am," "If you are," returned Tiller, "I will put up my gun, for I would not kill you for all America." Gooby then told him if he would not fight, he should come and see what damage his hog had done, to which the deceased consented. They then left the house, and in the course of the dispute, the deceased called Gooby a d——d liar, upon which the latter levelled his gun, (which was loaded with duck shot) and killed him instantly. The load entered the neck and passed through the spine.

It is said that Gooby, the day previous to the murder went to a neighbour's house and asked for as much shot as would kill a man, expressing at the same time, his intention to murder Tiller, the person to whom he made application, refused his request. He then wished to borrow 25 cents, that he might purchase some shot, this was also refused. He then went away saying, "I believe I have a charge at home, sufficient to kill the d——d negro," alluding to Tiller.

A coroner's jury was held over the body of the deceased, who brought in a verdict of wilful murder. The wife of the deceased, (who had gone from home,) was sent for, and on seeing the dead body of her husband, threw herself upon it, and a scene of lamentation ensued, which was sufficient to have affected the hardest heart. But the hardened wretch was unmoved; and on being asked if he did not feel sorry he had occasioned so much misery, he replied, "I only wish I had one more charge, that I might have shot her also."

The deceased and Gooby it appears had frequent quarrels, and the animosity of the latter seems to have gathered strength daily. He is a man of the most violent temper; and when committed to prison, expressed no symptoms of penitence whatever. He has a most astonishingly retentive memory: and it is seldom we see a man possessing a more intimate knowledge of the scriptures—yet he is superstitious in the highest degree.

The deceased has left a wife and four small children.

Savannah, April 29.

Execution.—Agreeably to appointment, the awful sentence of the law was this day, at half past 12 o'clock, performed upon John Hobson, alias John Furlong, (but has denied both of these names) convicted of murder and piracy.

The conduct of Furlong, during the period of his being brought from the jail, until he was executed, was marked with a degree of composure seldom witnessed on such occasions. He walked to the gallows with great boldness, where he knelt down and prayed for some time, aided by the priest. He resigned his life with the greatest composure—& apparently with a confident hope of pardon for his sins. For such was his coolness when he ascended the scaffold, the executioner having tied a single not upon the rope, that he remarked, "You do not understand your business," observing that the knot would slip, and desired him to make two half hitches upon it; when this was done, he said 'that will do.' The marshal asked him if he had any thing to say. He addressed the crowd and said, he hoped those around him would take warning by his unfortunate fate, and think twice before they act once. It is supposed his neck was broke when he dropped, as he died very suddenly. The crowd of spectators was immense and the scene impressive.

Since sentence was passed upon him, he appeared to be devoutly engaged in preparing himself for the awful change. He has not pretended to deny the justness of his sentence.

This was also the day fixed for the execution of Ralph Clintock, David Bower, and Henry Matthews, for the crime of piracy; but the executive of the United State has respited them till the middle of June next.

GEORGETOWN, APRIL 19.

This day the awful sentence of the law was executed on William Piper, for matricide. Early in the day a crowd was collected, and another at the gallows. At 12 o'clock the tolling of the bell at the court house, announced the arrival of the time when the prisoner was about to bid adieu to all earthly things. The bell tolled 10 minutes, when the sheriff entered the jail with the rope; 25 minutes past 12, the criminal appeared, and was assisted into the cart and standing up with a horrible frighted countenance, he uttered the broken sentence, "Oh, all these people!" The cart-horse was led off by the deputy sheriff, the guard forming round the cart and marching with charged bayonets: at 32 minutes past 12, the criminal had halted under the pole on which he was soon to be suspended.

The Rev. John Rogers addressed the people, and warned them against drunkenness, the crime he said, that caused the criminal to do the act that brought him to the gallows. The throne of grace was then addressed in a very appropriate prayer by the Rev. Mr. Hudson; after which the criminal spoke a few minutes to the congregation, declaring a knowledge of his sins pardoned. The sheriff drew the cap over his face, and fastening the rope to the hook on the end of the pole, at 13 minutes past 1, the cart was moved off, and the criminal left hanging! A horrid consequence of drunkenness!

A Pear Tree, brought from Holland, and planted in the year 1647, is now in full bloom, standing in the third Avenue at the intersection of Thirteenth street, New York. This is probably the oldest fruit tree in America. About 70 years ago the branches of the tree decayed and fell off, and at that time it was supposed the tree was dying; but without any artificial means being resorted to, new shoots germinated and gradually supplyed the room of their predecessors. The tree is now in full health and vigour, and appears to be not more than 30 years old; the fruit ripens the latter part of August, has a rich succulent flavour, and has been known by the name of the spice pear.

Miscellaneous.

From the Boston Gazette.

HISTORICAL SKETCHES.

The first Americans known to have visited the western country, were James M'Bride, & several others, who in the year 1754, descended the Ohio, as far as the mouth of Kentucky river.

In 1769, Colonel Daniel Boon, and a few others, undertook to explore the vast wilderness, then so little known. After many hardships and fatigues they reached the neighborhood of Lexington, where they remained until 1778.

In 1775, Colonel Boon with a party of soldiers and emigrants built fort Boonsborough, which was the first settlement made in the state of Kentucky.

Notwithstanding many obstacles, the inhabitants of Kentucky were estimated in 1784, at 12,000 souls. No settlements were made north of the Ohio, until three or four years afterwards.

On the first of March, 1786, the "Ohio, Company," was formed at Boston, consisting of officers and soldiers of the revolution, who by an act of Congress, were entitled to a military grant of land in the territory northwest of the Ohio. This company completed a contract with Congress for one million five hundred thousand acres. On the 27th of Nov. 1787. An association of 46 men, under General Rufus Putnam, proceeded to take possession of the purchase; and on the 7th of April following, they pitched their camp and cleared the ground where Marietta now stands.

In 1788, Congress passed an ordinance establishing a colonial government over the Northwest Territory. Arthur St. Clair was appointed Governor.

Cincinnati was first called Losantiville, but Governor St. Clair in 1790 altered its name. In 1790, the population of this place consisted only of eleven families.

In 1792, a Presbyterian church was erected in Cincinnati, and the citizens were compelled by law, to take their fire arms with them, when they attended church. The first school was also established this year, and consisted of about 30 scholars.

In 1792, the small pox broke out among the soldiers at Fort Washington, & about one third of the citizens and soldiers fell victims to its ravages. [This was the same year it spread throughout Boston.]

Since the above period the population of the western country has increased in ratio truly astonishing.

In 1810, the population of Cincinnati was estimated at 2300; in 1813, at about 4000; and in 1819, at more than 10,000; "an increase truly astonishing." The greatest part of the population is said to be from the middle or northern States; but there is also a mixed assemblage of emigrants from almost every part of Christendom, and it is not uncommon to hear three or four different languages spoken in the streets at the same time.

In 1819, in Cincinnati, there were 1890 buildings, many of brick and stone, of two stories and upwards; 10 places of Public Worship, five Banks, a Court House, Jail, two Market Houses, several Manufactories, &c.

Some of the religious societies were formed in Cincinnati, with only ten members, and all have been created within sixteen years. There are also several Bible Societies, Sabbath School Societies, a Medical Society, Humane Society, &c.

Since the introduction of steam-boats, considerable attention has been paid at Cincinnati to exportation; and from October 1818, to March 1819, it amounted to 1,334,080 dollars, and consisted of flour, pork, bacon, lard, tobacco, &c. while the amount of imports, to 1,619,030. 1,442,266.

They seem to be convinced that the only way to relieve the western states, from their present embarrassments, is to export more and import less, which will soon effect a rapid change in their affairs.

About 60 steam boats, from 25 to 700 tons, and many of them finished in a style of elegance and taste, are now in successful operation, and most of them have been built within two or three years.

There are three auctioneers in Cincinnati, 25 Attorneys, 22 Physicians, three companies of "Independent Military," handsomely uniformed, whose appearance is no wise inferior to the eastern military.

Three newspapers are now printed at Cincinnati, all upon an imperial sheet.

It is estimated that 120,000 bushels of salt are sold annually at Cincinnati, which at one dollar fifty cents per bushel, amounts to 180,000 dollars.

We might enlarge the items, and several other articles worthy of record, but our limits will not permit.

Trait of American History.

In the reign of Queen Anne, a ship of about three hundred tons, mounting twenty cannons, manned by pirates, appeared off the Harbor of Newport cruizing between Block Island and Point Judith, interrupting every vessel that attempted to pass, & treating their crews with severity. To remove an annoyance so injurious to the comfort & prosperity of the inhabitants of Newport, two resolute young men, John & William Wanton, determined to attempt her capture, and the means they resorted to were as novel as the success was glorious. They no sooner intimated their intention than they were joined by thirty young men of their acquaintance. A sloop of about sixty tons was engaged for the enterprize. This noble band went on board with only their fire arms, and sailed out of the harbor to all appearance on a coasting voyage; every person being below, except a sufficient number to navigate the sloop. As they drew near, apparently with an intention to pass the ship, a shot was fired at them. They immediately lowered the peak of their main sail, and luffed up for the ship; but instead of bringing her along side they came directly under her stern, when the men jumped on deck, and grappled her to the ship, & with wedges ready for the purpose fastened her rudder, by driving them between that and the post. Having so far succeeded in their enterprize each man took up his musket, and all being marksmen, every pirate that shewed himself on board the ship was instantly shot; and, after a great variety of unavailing efforts to disengage themselves, and after loosing a great number of their men, they surrendered, and were brought in triumph by this gallant band into the harbor of New-Port. Queen Ann being informed of this heroic achievement, presented the two brothers John and William Wanton, with a large silver bowl & salver, on which was engraved a latin quatrian appropriate to the exploit.

To the Editors of the National Recorder.

A few months ago a farmer living a few miles from Easton, sent his daughter on horseback to that town, to procure smaller notes in exchange for one of one hundred dollars. When she arrived there the bank was shut, and she endeavored to effect her object by offering it at several stores, but could not get her note changed. She had not gone far on her return, when a stranger rode up to the side of her horse, and accosted her with so much politeness that she had not the suspicion of any evil intention on his part. After a ride of a mile or two, employed in very social conversation, they came to a retired part of the road and he commanded her to give him the bank note. It was with some difficulty she could be made to believe him in earnest, as his demeanor had been so very friendly; but the presentation of a pistol placed the matter beyond a doubt, and she yielded to necessity. Just as she held the note to him, a sudden puff of wine blew it into the road, and carried it gently several yards from them. The courteous knight alighted to overtake it, and the lady whipped her horse to get out of his power, and the other horse who had been left by her side started off with her. His owner fired a pistol, which only tended to increase the speed of all parties, and the young lady arrived safely at home with the horse of the robber, on which was a pair of saddlebags. When these were opened, they were found to contain, besides a quantity of counterfeit bank notes, fifteen hundred dollars in good money! The horse was a good one, and when saddled and bridled, was thought to be worth at least as much as the bank note that was stolen.

As this story is some what wonderful, I enclose you my name as a voucher for the truth of it, and am yours, &c.

Interesting anecdote of Frederick the Great.

A reduced officer who had served with great reputation as a Lieutenant Colonel during the war of seven years, repaired every day to the king's anti-chamber to solicit a pension. The king had often said to him, "have patience, I cannot at present do any thing for you." The officer was not repulsed and wherever he found the king, did not fail to importune him. The king, tired of his perseverance, ordered that he should be admitted no more. In the mean time a violent satire appeared against Frederick, who, contrary to his usual custom, promised a reward of fifty louis for the discovery of the author. The next day the lieutenant colonel repaired to the palace, but was refused admittance. He persisted however, adding that he had something of importance to communicate to his majesty. He is announced and enters. Have I not told you, said Frederick, that I can do nothing for you at present? I require nothing, answered the officer, but what your majesty has promised. I am the author of the pamphlet, &c. Punish me if you please but pay the fifty louis to buy bread for my wretched children. The devil confound you, said the king, you shall go to the Spandau. [This is a fortress where military and state prisoners are either confined or obliged to work on the fortifications.] Sire, said the officer, I submit to whatever your majesty orders with respect to myself; but do not forget the money. In an hour's time, replied the king, your wife shall have it.

The king then sat down, wrote a letter, and gave it to the officer, saying, you will deliver it to the commandant at the Spandau, and tell him I forbid him to open it until he has dined. He then ordered the officer to be conducted to the Spandau. He arrives there, and presents the letter to the commandant, with the verbal orders. The commandant dines. The officer remains in cruel suspense; the letter is at last opened and read as follows:

"The bearer of this letter is appointed commandant of the fortress at Spandau. His wife and children will be there soon with fifty louis. The former commandant will repair to potzdam, where a better place awaits him.

FREDERICK."

ANECDOTE.

Canandaigua, (N. Y.) May 6.

A soldier in the American army, belonging to Weston, in this state, about the time General Brock was killed at the battle of Queenstown, was on a scouting party one day. Being a man of courage, enterprize, and sagacity, he was determined if possible, to obtain an accurate knowledge of the position of the enemy. For this purpose he ventured to separate from his companions. In the course of his reconnoitering alone, in an open field, he approached a wood, the under brush of which was very thick. His watchful eye discovered what he at first supposed to be some animal among the bushes. He immediately saw his mistake; it was an Indian crawling on his hands and feet, with his rifle in his hand, and watching the soldier, evidently with the intention of advancing sufficiently near to make him a sure mark. For the soldier to retreat was now impossible; he thought he could not escape, and he remembered too, that his father, had told him never to return home with a backside wound. He pretended not to see the Indian and walked slowly towards him, with his gun cocked by his side, carefully observing his movements. They approached nearer and nearer; at length he saw the Indian bring the gun to his shoulder—and at that instant the soldier fell to the ground—the ball whistled its deadly music over his head. The soldier lay motionless. The Indian uttered the dreadful yell which signifies the death of an enemy, and the bloody scalping knife, (but forgetting to re-load his piece) advanced with hasty strides, thirsting for murder. The soldier motionless, permitted him to approach within ten paces; he then, with the utmost composure, sprung upon his feet. The savage stood aghast. The soldier, with deliberate aim, put two balls directly through his heart. A hoarse groan was the only sound that issued from the fallen savage. This son of the forest was at least six feet five inches in height. The soldier took the Indian's rifle, returned to the camp, and sold it for twenty five dollars.

From a London Paper.

A Good Customer.—A Correspondent of a Provincial paper, under the signature of "A Schardsdale Farmer," having written with some asperity on the subject of ale measures used by innkeepers, "A Publican" says, in his reply, "If I am not mistaken, the Schardsdale Farmer was in my house the other evening. He entered at the kitchen door, and immediately scraped his shoes upon a bar that is attached to the first grate; he then surveyed the bar, and at length took to the parlor. At these times, Mr. Editor, it behoves us to be economical, and for this reason, my servant had made up a substantial fire, which my guest immediately destroyed with the poker. The bell rang most furiously—'Did you call, Sir?' 'Bring me a half pint of ale, full measure.' The order was executed. The bell again: 'Did you ring, Sir?' 'Bring me a clean pipe, I have tobacco in my pocket.' Bell agin—'Did you call Sir?'—'Bring me a spitting-box.'—'Directly, Sir.' The bell—'What do you want, Sir?' Bring me the Newspaper.'—'Yes, Sir.' The bell—'What have I to pay?'—'Two pence, Sir.' 'Take it out of this one pound note; and be sure you bring me good silver.'—Thus, Mr. Editor, my coal was destroyed; half a mould candle wasted; servant's attendance, &c. and for what? My ale cost me 2s 4d per gallon; I sell it at 2s 8d. which leaves a profit of one farthing upon the Schardsdale Farmer's half pint full measure!

ANECDOTE OF DR. FRANKLIN.

Related by Mr. Jefferson, in a letter of the 4th of December, 1818.

When the Declaration of Independence was under the consideration of Congress, there were two or three unlucky expressions in it, which gave offence to some members. The words "Scotch and other auxiliaries" excited the ire of a gentleman or two from that country. Severe strictures on the conduct of the British king, in negativing our frequent repeals of the law which permitted the importation of slaves, were disapproved by some southern gentlemen, whose reflections were not yet matured to the full abhorrence of that traffic. Although the offensive expressions were immediately yielded, those gentlemen continued their depredations on other parts of the instrument. I was sitting by Dr. Franklin, who perceived that I was not insensible to the mutilations. "I have made it a rule, (said he) whenever it is in my power, to avoid becoming the draughtsman of papers to be reviewed by a public body. I took my lessons from an incident when I was a journeyman printer; one of my companions, an apprentice hatter, having served out his time, was about to open shop for himself. His first [illegible] with a proper inscription. He composed it in these words; "John Thompson, Hattter, makes and sells hats for ready money," with the figure of a hat subjoined. But he thought he would submit it to his friends for their amendments. The first he showed it to thought the word hatter tautologous because followed by the words makes hats, which shew he was a hatter. It was struck out. The next observed that the word makes might as well be omitted, because his customers would not care, who made the hats; if good and to their mind they would buy, by whomsoever made. He struck it out. A third said he thought the words for ready money were useless, as it was not the custom of the place to sell on credit; every one who purchased expected to pay. They were parted with; and the inscription now stood, 'John Thompson sells hats'. "Sells hats! (says his next friend) why no body will expect you to give them away. What then is the use of that word?" It was stricken out, & hats followed, which immediately shared the same fate by the person who next examined it, who thought it unnecessary, there being the figure of a hat painted on the board; so his inscription was reduced ultimately to 'John Thompson,' with the figure of a hat subjoined.

CONTRAST BETWEEN ITALY AND ENGLAND.

For all those sinful doings I must say,
That Italy's a pleasant place for me,
Who loves to see the sun shine every day,
And vines (not nailed to walls) from tree to tree
Festooned much like the back scenes of a play;
Or melo-drama, which people flock to see,
When the first act is ended by a dance
In vineyards copied from the south of France.

I like on autumn's evening to ride out
Without being forced to bid my groom be sure
My cloak's around his middle strapp'd about,
Because the skies are not the most secure;
I know too, that if stopp'd upon my route,
Where the green alley windingly allure,
Reeling with grapes red wagons choak the way;
In England 'twould be dung, dust, or a dray.

I also like to dine on tacaccas,
To see the sun set, sure he'll rise to-morrow,
Not through a misty morning, twinkling weak as
A drunken man's dead eye, in maudling sorrow,
But with all Heaven t'himself; that day will break as Beauteous, as cloudless, nor be forced to borrow
That sort of farthing candle light which glimmers
Where reeking London's smoaky caldron simmers.

I love the language, that soft bastard latin
Which melts like kisses from a female mouth,
And sounds as if it should be done on satin,
With syllables which breaths of the sweet south;
And gentle liquids, gliding all so pat in,
That not a single accent sounds uncouth;
Not like our harsh northern, whistling, grunting guttural,
Which we're obliged to hiss and spit, and sputter all.

GAZETTE.

MONDAY MORNING, MAY 22, 1820.

WE cannot help smiling when we meet with such a passage as the following, in such a historian as Tacitus. This writer stands in the first rank of philosophical historians; he generally spurns at every thing that bears the least semblance of fable, & even where simple facts are variously related by different historians, he weighs the probability on both sides with great caution and judgment and decides in favour of that which is most consonant with the usual order of nature. It is to be regretted that this author is not more generally read; there never was a more profound observer of human nature, and the translation by Murphy, preserves the spirit of the original in a very different manner from the generality of translations.

"Paulus Fabius and Lucious Vitellius succeeded to the Consulship. [A. U. C. 787. A. D. 34.] In the course of the year, the miraculous bird known to the world by the name of the Phœnix, after disapearing for a series of ages, revisited Egypt. A phenomenon so very extraordinary, could not fail to produce abundance of curious speculation. The learning of Egypt was displayed, and Greece exhausted her ingenuity. The facts about which there seems to be a concurrence of opinions, with other circumstances, in their nature doubtful, yet worthy of notice, will not be unwelcome to the reader.

"That the Phœnix is sacred to the sun, and differs from the rest of the feathered species, in the form of its head, and the tincture of its plumage, are points settled by the naturalists. Of its longevity, the accounts are various. The common persuasion is, that it lives five hundred years, though by some writers the date is extended to fourteen hundred and sixty one. The several æras, when the Phœnix has been seen, are fixed by tradition. The first, we are told, was in the reign of Sosistris, the second in that of Amasis; and in the period when Ptolomy, the third of the Macedonian race, was seated on the throne of Egypt, another Phœnix directed its flight towards Heliopolis, and attended by a group of various birds, all attracted by the novelty, and gazing with wonder at so beautiful an appearance. For the truth of this account we do not presume to answer. The facts lie too remote, and, covered as they are with the mists of antiquity, all further argument is suspended.

"From the reign of Ptolomy to Tiberius, the intermediate space is not quite two hundred and fifty years. From that circumstance it has been inferred by many that the last Phœnix was neither of the genuine kind, nor came from the woods of Arabia. The instinctive qualities of the species were not observed to direct its motions. It is the genius, we are told, of the Phœnix, when its course of years is finished, and the approach of death is felt, to build a nest in its native clime, & there deposit the principles of life, from which a new progeny arises. The first care of the young bird, as soon as fledged, and able to trust to its wings, is to perform the obsequies of his father. But this duty is not undertaken rashly. He collects a quantity of myrrh, and, to try its strength, makes frequent excursions with a load on his back. When he had made his experiment through a long tract of air, and gains sufficient confidence in his own vigour, he takes up the body of his father, and flies with it to the [illegible] embalmed in flames of fragrance. Such is the account of this extraordinary bird. It has no doubt, a mixture of fable; but that the Phœnix from time to time, appears in Egypt, seems to be a fact sufficiently ascertained."

New-York.—It is now ascertained that De Witt Clinton is re-elected Governor of the state of New-York, by a majority of more than two thousand votes; whilst in the Senate there is said to be chosen a majority of six members, and in the house of Assembly of eighteen or twenty members, opposed to his administration. This is supposed to decide the complexion of the Council of Appointment with whom resides the immense patronage which centres in the Executive authority of the state of New-York. The excitement of the contest has been very great; and it is difficult to say whether the result is on the one hand most lamented, or on the other most rejoiced at. Nat. Int.

United States' Bank stock is quoted in New York at 97 1-2, or two & a half per cent below par. The rise in the price of the stock seems to indicate the expectation of a dividend being declared by the Bank in July. ib.

Colombian Flag.—The first vessel bearing this Flag arrived at Philadelphia yesterday morning. On the field are three stars, representing the three grand departments of the Republic of Colombia, viz: Venezuela, New-Greneda or Cundinamarca, and Quito. These are also designated by three stripes or flutes; yellow, blue and red.—Balt. Pat. May 9.

The St. James Chronicle, a paper of respectable authority, gives to the Spanish news, however important it may be, a more intense interest, by the publication of the following intelligence;—

We do not speak from light authority when we state the fact, that the neighbouring kingdom of Portugal is forward in its preparations to follow the example of Spain, and that the consolidation of the whole Peninsula into one powerful free monarchy is at hand. This is we believe, the first public intimation of the probability of an event, which must exercise an important influence upon the fate of Europe.

Duel.

Another duel was fought on the 20th ult. at Arkansas, between General William O. Allen, a member of the legislature, and Robert Oden, Esq. in which Mr. C. Oden was wounded, and Gen. Allen killed!

His Majesty George the Fourth, was proclaimed at Montreal and Quebeck, on Friday the 28th ult. The ceremony was performed with great pomp and solemnity. On Monday the 24th, in commemoration of St. George, the tutelar Saint of England, and to celebrate the birth of George IV. a number of gentlemen of Montreal partook of an elegant dinner.—The toasts were liberal & patriotic—Queen Caroline not being forgotten. Among them was the following—

The United States' Bank, May 3, 1810.

In the exchanges made with the city Banks at the Bank of the United States, this day, it was discovered by Mr. Patterson, the principal Teller, that the following banks had received the counterfeit note of $500, viz:—The Pennsylvania Farmers' and Mechanics,' and Schuylkill.

These notes are good imitations. On examination it will be observed that the paper is thicker, and whiter, the water mark not so plain as in the genuine note; the letter & figure engraving much bolder, and particularly the rays issuing from the United States arms.

The signature of Jona Smith, Cashier, is well executed, that of W. Jones, President, in a rounder letter. The notes which have been detected are payable to J. Patterson or Bearer, letters C. and D.

UNITED STATES' BANK.

May 6, 1820.

The public have been informed that counterfeit notes of the denomination of five hundred dollars of the parent bank, were detected on the 3d inst. by the principal teller of the Bank of the United States, on the exchange of notes that morning with the city banks. Since that time counterfeit notes of the denomination of 50 dollars, also of the parent bank have appeared in circulation.

These denominations of notes are imitated from plates engraved by Tanner, Kearney, & Tiebout, and with one other of five dollars, of the parent bank, are the only plates executed by those artists, and the same style of engraving from which notes have been issued. The directors of the bank of the United States have determined not to re-issue these notes, and that they shall be paid at any of their offices.

All the other plates from which notes have been printed and issued by the Bank of the United States, both of the parent bank and of the offices, have been engraved by Murray, Fairman & Co. and executed with their dies. The directors of the Bank of the U. States, & the public generally, have confidence in the security from counterfeits, given to bank notes executed by these artists.

From the description of the counterfeit notes herewith published, they may on inspection be easily detected.

Description of the counterfeit notes of the Parent Bank United States, now in circulation.

$500, imitations 1 a plate engraved by Tanner, Kearney, & Tiebout, viz.

Letters A, B, C, and D, filled up, payable to J. Patterson or bearer, dated Jan. 1, 1817. The paper is thicker, water mark hardly to be discerned, and the general appearance of the engraving bolder, more particularly the vignette, & the arms of the United States The rays issuing from the arms are much stronger. The signature of Jona. Smith, Cashier, is well executed; that of Wm. Jones, is written in a rounder letter.

Notes of Fifty Dollars, of the parent bank, imitated from a plate engraved by Tanner, Kearny, & Tiebout, letters A, B, C, and D, filled up, payable to J. Patterson, dated 1st January, 1817. The general appearance of this note similar to the counterfeits of the $500 plate.

On holding these counterfeit notes level with the eye, and looking over the surface, they appear to be very smooth, or glazed, and the vignettes and impressions of the dies at the end of the notes, appear to be much darker and more shining than the original notes.

LATEST FROM ENGLAND.

The remains of the venerable President of the Royal Academy, Benjamin West, on the 29th of March, were solemnly interred in St. Paul's Church yard The hearse was followed by forty two mourning carriages, containing chief mourners, members of the Royal Academy, &c. These were succeeded by the private carriages of the Lord Mayor, the Archbishop of Canterbury, three Dukes, three Marquises, two Earls, one Viscount, four Bishops, and thirty two other gentlemen.

A Vienna article of March 8, says:—It is confidently said that Austria and Prussia have issued an ultimatum, in which they have declared that they have decided (in concert with the Ministers of several other Courts,) to establish without delay, an army of Observation of 40,000 men, half Austrians, half Prussians, upon the Rhine, from Wesel to Mayence. This army is to be doubled on the first alarm; is to be always ready to take the field, and the expense of it to be divided amongst the Confederate Powers. It may be considered as the advance guard of the Army of the Holy Alliance, and perhaps that report of the expected arrival of its Commander in Chief (Duke of Wellington) upon the Continent, is not without foundation.

Births, Marriages, and Deaths at Paris.

It appears, by an official return, that the number of births at Paris in 1819, were males, 12403; females, 11,939; total 24,342. Deaths, males, 11,054; females, 12,616; total, 22,670. Mariages, 6246. The births include 8641 illegitimate children, of whom 1984 were acknowledged; the rest not acknowledged. The deaths include 1352 children born dead, of which 757 were males, and 595 females. The number of suicides in the course of the year were 376.

HARTFORD, (Con.) May 1.

Bronchotomy.—We feel it our duty to advise the public of a Surgical operation performed a few days since by Dr. Cogswell of this city. The patient, a most interesting little girl about 8 years old, is the daughter of Judge Trumbull. The accident which called for the operation was the lodgement of a Tamarind stone in the trachea, or windpipe. It is called in technical language Bronchotomy, and consists in cutting into the front part of the neck down to the windpipe, which is opened for the purpose of extracting the offending body. This operation was borne with astonishing fortitude by the little patient. So soon as the windpipe was cut open, the stone was projected about two feet by the force of the air expired by the lungs; and thus the patient was preserved from certain death.

Bronchotomy, though in idea a most dreadful operation owing to the part into which the incision is made, is yet attended with no hazzard to the patient, when performed by a skilful surgeon, and considering the many instances in which children as well as adults, have lost their lives by accidents for which this operation is a certain remedy, we cannot but conclude that it is not so frequently performed as it ought to be. It may be remarked, that several of the most eminent surgeons in Europe as well as in this country have never performed Bronchotomy.

Counterfeiter taken. We understand by a gentleman who arrived in town last evening, that the person who passed the counterfeit 500 dollar United States Bank notes on some of the Philadelphia Banks, was apprehended yesterday in Charlestown, Maryland, on his way to Baltimore, and is safely lodged in Elkton jail. The Cashier of the Wilmington Bank, from some private information, followed the suspected person, which led to his apprehension. There were two in company—one escaped. Nearly all the money drawn from the banks was recovered.—Chronicle.

The celebrated traveller, Mr. Belzoni, has arrived in this metropolis, after an absence of ten years, five of which has been employed in arduous researches after the curious remains of antiquity in Egypt and Nubia. The famous sarcophagus of alabaster discovered by him in Thebes, is safely deposited in the hands of the British Consul of Alexandria, waiting its embarkation for England along with the obelisk, 22 feet long, taken by Mr. Belzoni, from Philæ, above the first cataract of the Nile. Mr. Belzoni's journal of his discoveries in Egypt and Nubia, and of his journey on the coast of the Red Sea and the Oassis, will be published as soon as possible. The model of the beautiful tomb discovered by Mr. Belzoni, Thebes, will be erected as soon as a convenient place shall be found for its reception. Lon. pap.

REVOLUTIONARY OFFICERS.

The die is cast and the scanty pittance destined & due to the few remaining patriots of 1776, (it has been determined by a vote of 95 to 74 in the Hall of the House of Representatives,) shall be withheld from them. This too is the "debt of gratitude," of which we have heard so much from the walls of the Capitol. This too, is another instance of pure Democratic Economy; for the opposing number of ninety-five, with the exception of five (which we blush to acknowledge there should be one such found) were Democrats. Yet these are the men who will prate to us of the blood expended by our Revolutionary patriots, of the privations they underwent for their country's cause and yet will refuse a bare subsistence to them now, when tottering on the verge of the grave; many, too many of them, to our country's shame nearly wanting the necessaries of life.

But you, aged patriots, with a St. Clair & a Starke, must descend to the dreary mansions of the tomb, bearing testimony to the ingratitude of your country. But what could you expect, when they have denied to the memory of Washington, a marble to direct the enquiring stranger where rests the remains of the saviour of his country.

Yet these on every occasion will resort to the revered name of the Hero, to give some interest to their most uninteresting debates.

Ungrateful men—his name in spite of your parsimony, shall shine with renewed lustre on the historian's page in ages hence, when yours shall have been buried in oblivion, or remembered only by a reference to the black record of ingratitude. Experience should make us wise, and these pretended and professed champions of the 'sons of liberty,' should no longer have the support of those, who during a revolutionary struggle, so well secured their claim to that title.—*Fed. BENJAMIN WEST.—This distinguished American artist, died in London at the advanced age of 82, being born on the 10th of October, 1738, in Chester county, Pennsylvania. His genius and industry as a painter have never been surpassed, and his productions will long be admired for their great and unrivalled merit. He was much attached to his native country, and took great pleasure in conversing with his fellow citizens, and giving every facility to American artists—he viewed our progress in arts, in arms, and in science, with deep interest, and his long absence did not alienate his affections from his native land. "Yesterday, (said he to an American) was fifty years since I first arrived in London—I remember travelling on the top of the Canterbury coach, and stopping two miles from London, at a mean tavern, and taking a dinner before I entered the metropolis to seek my fortune; and I could not help yesterday going to the same tavern, calling for a dinner alone in the same room, looking back on the fifty years I had spent, the progress I had made in my profession, the friends I possessed, and the adventures I had met with." This was a singular epoch in the life of an individual.

THE PORT FOLIO.

We have been more than usually gratified by an attentive perusal of the last number of this valuable work. It was formerly published in monthly numbers, but has now assumed, the more commanding form of a quarterly Magazine and Review, and will, in a short time, under suitable encouragement, unite all the desirable and useful properties of an Annual Register. The contents of the first quarter for this year, are truly rich, abundant, and various, both as to subjects under consideration, and the luminous manner of treating them. The work altogether evinces much talent, and patient and persevering industry in Mr. Hall and his confederates; and we wish them every possible success.

A young man on the point of marriage, was drawn from the militia in Lorraine—I do despair replied he to the count de Miary, captain of the regiment, who, in compassion gave his word that the service should not exceed one year. The term expired, the captain explained to the colonel, and requested the man's discharge, which the colonel flatly refused, as he said the subject was an excellent soldier & did credit to the corps. Next day he was surprised when the captain waited on him in the soldier's attire, knapsack and musket, with this address: "Colonel as the word of a gentleman is sacred; and I have pledged mine that this man should only serve for a year, here is my commission of captain, which I resign, and am ready to serve in his place." The colonel with shame and amazement signed the discharge. London Pap.

An Ordinance,

Relative to the Market-house in Second streets, between Grant and Ross street.

WHEREAS it hath became manifest, that the Market-house in Second street, between Grant and Ross streets, is altogether useless, and has become ruinous and an annoyance to the citizens in that part of the city; and whereas the legal representatives of the late Col. James O'Hara, and a number of citizens, holders of lots fronting on the public space or area, where said Market-house is situated, have petitioned the Councils that the Market-house be removed, and that the space of thirty feet on each side of Second street extending throughout from Grant to Ross streets be accepted and declared a public area, space or square for public purposes, and the representatives of the said James O'Hara, have by deed bearing date this day conveyed the same to the city to that intent and effect.

Be it therefore ordained and enacted by the citizens of Pittsburgh in Select and Common Councils assembled—That the deed aforesaid be accepted by the city for the premises, therein mentioned, and for the purposes therein expressed, and that the same shall remain forever for the purposes therein stipulated, mentioned and described, and that all the space and ground thus granted and conveyed, shall be maintained, kept and repaired at the city's expense, as other streets and highways within the city And further that the street commissioners of the city under the direction of the mayor, shall immediately proceed on the execution and recording of said deed, to remove the market-house now erected in Second, between Grant and Ross streets, and dispose of the same and distribute the proceeds thereof among the contributors to its erection, in proportion to their original advances.

Ordained and enacted into a law, in Council the 17th day of May, A. D. 1820.

Beauty, Utility and Durability!

THE public are respectfully informed that the subscriber has finally concluded to remain in this city some length of time, in order to afford an ample opportunity to residents of having their houses or parts thereof, plainly painted or ornamented as may best suit their taste. The work is executed with despatch, either in oil or water colours, in exact imitation of paper hangings or according to any given design.

The superiority of this mode of decorating apartments in preference to paper hangings lies chiefly in its permanency, as it will bear cleansing by washing, and the choice of colours, patterns, landscapes, etc. etc. suitable to the size and situation of the apartment.

The expense is not more than that of papering and renewable in any manner most suitable.

Eastern and Western HOTEL.

THE subscriber informs the public that he has rented a large and commodious building, in Water street, a few paces east of the Monongahela Bridge. This situation is truly beautiful, commanding a view up and down the Monongahela and Ohio rivers of at least two miles.—This, added to the fresh breezes which continually arise from said rivers, cannot fail to give it an advantage over many others in point of health. The western mail stage passes regularly near the door.

Also, good STABLING, with careful attendants and a LARGE YARD well enclosed, with good substantial gates, so that wagons, carriages, &c. will be perfectly safe. He hopes by paying such attention to travellers as ought to make them comfortable, he may merit and receive a share of public patronage.
